

DON'T NOD STRENGTHENS ITS BOARD OF DIRECTORS

Paris, 14 January 2026 – DON'T NOD, an independent video game publisher and studio, announces a change to its Board of Directors.

The Board of Directors has decided to appoint Nicolas Vienot as an independent director, replacing Julie Chalmette, who will focus on her executive responsibilities as Deputy General Manager.

Nicolas Viénot's appointment will be subject to ratification at the next General Meeting of Shareholders.

Nicolas Viénot (46), Managing Director and co-founder of Alloy Technology Partners, has 20 years of experience in Investment banking, as successfully completed complex cross-border transactions, including capital raises, divestitures, and acquisitions across multiple sectors worldwide.

Prior to Alloy Technology Partners, Nicolas served as Managing Director at Alantra, a mid-market investment bank, where he built and led the Gaming practice. During his time leading Alantra's Gaming team, he advised investors and founders of highly respected studios and publishers.

Nicolas is French, based in Paris, and spent nearly 10 years in the U.K. during his career.

Oskar Guilbert, Chairman and CEO of DON'T NOD, said: « Beyond his in-depth knowledge of the video game ecosystem, Nicolas brings to the Board a complementary perspective and a distinct financial and strategic vision, built on twenty years of experience in capital markets and transactions. At a time when financial discipline and sustainable value creation are central to our priorities, this additional expertise will be a strong asset in supporting DON'T NOD's profitable growth strategy. »
