

Revenue of the 4th quarter 2025: €15 million on a comparable scope

Prodways Group recorded revenue of €15 million on a comparable basis in the fourth quarter of 2025, a slight decrease compared with the same period in 2024. The trends identified in previous quarters were confirmed across all business lines, bringing full-year revenue to €54.5 million, compared with €59 million published last year.

At the beginning of 2026, the company reported progress in the sale process of its Software distribution business, in line with the strategy presented the previous year. As a result, Prodways Group has reclassified this business as a discontinued operation, in accordance with IFRS 5. With the application of this standard, IFRS revenue for 2025 stands at €41 million.

To ensure a clear understanding of the Group's past and future revenue, the company presents two revenue tables below: one applying IFRS 5 (with the Software business restated, including in historical data), and another including the revenues from this activity to assess 2025 performance.

4th quarter and full-year 2025 revenue by division – including Software revenues

The 2024 quarterly revenues published last year contained an accounting error in the distribution of revenues between Q3 2024 and Q4 2024. Q3 2024 revenue was €12.7 million (vs. €14.7 million reported). Q4 2024 revenue was €14.9 million (vs. €12.9 million reported). The table below provides a comparison with the corrected figures. A summary table of 2024 revenues corrected by quarter is available at the end of the press release

Systems division: €8.2 million in Q4 (including Software activity)

The Systems division recorded revenue of €8.2 million, representing +4% growth compared with Q4 2024.

At the end of 2025, new orders for ceramic MovingLight printers were delivered to aerospace-sector companies: one for an existing customer expanding its installed base, and the others for new customers. Although the growth in 2025 is encouraging, it is not yet sufficient to generate significant cash flow. For now, the potential for additional ceramic printer sales is substantial and diversified, with some customers considering moving from R&D to production. However, it remains uncertain whether this potential will translate into actual orders.

Material sales declined in Q4 2025 due to reduced consumption among dental-sector customers. The absence of new printer sales dedicated to this application and increased international competition are putting pressure on this activity.

Software activity strengthened in Q4 2025, helping stabilize annual revenue despite the transition to a SaaS model. This performance highlights the work accomplished by technical and sales teams in gaining market share in France.

Products division: €6.4 million in Q4

In the 4th quarter 2025, the Products division generated €6.4 million in revenue, down €0.6 million compared with the same period last year. This trend is consistent with previous quarters, primarily due to previously identified factors.

Digital Manufacturing remains heavily impacted by declining sales in the German market (-€0.5 million). In contrast, France saw an improvement in Q4 revenue, supported by the completion of several small-series projects.

Audiology-related revenue also posted a slight decline compared with Q4 2024. While the reorganization of commercial teams is beginning to yield positive results, certain internal production challenges are still weighing on performance this year.

Status of the Software business sale process

In 2025, Prodways Group set the strategic objective of advancing the divestment of the Systems division's activities. A first step could be achieved in 2026 with the sale of the Software distribution business. This process has advanced in recent weeks, attracting interest from several potential buyers. Prodways Group will provide updates on the progress of this transaction, if applicable, as soon as new milestones are reached.

2026 objectives

In 2025, the Group focused on improving the profitability of each activity rather than growing revenue. For 2026, Prodways Group maintains this priority and therefore aims to keep revenue stable or slightly increasing. This objective applies both to the current scope and to a scope excluding the Software activity. Profitability targets will be communicated during the annual results presentation.
