Revitalization of the Aulnay site:
the Company ID Logistics is ready to create nearly 600 jobs

In the context of the mission set up by PSA Peugeot Citroën to revitalize the Aulnay site, the company ID Logistics announces today its project to establish itself on part of the currently available surface area. This would result in the creation of nearly 600 jobs. These jobs could be offered to the current employees of the PSA Peugeot Citroën Aulnay site who would be interested, as part of the revitalization process which is going to be initiated in collaboration with the Unions.

ID Logistics is a French company which specializes in contract logistics; it has experienced a rapid growth since its creation 10 years ago. ID Logistics currently employs 9,450 people on about 100 sites, in 12 countries, and exploits more than 2 million square meters of warehouses in Europe, Latin America, Asia and Africa. Within a decade, its revenue has grown from 18 to 462 million euros a year. Working with the retail and industry sectors, ID Logistics proposes highly technical solutions, and is characterized by its resolutely sustainable approach.

Beside the favorable location of the Aulnay site, ID Logistics wishes to benefit from the recognized competences of the PSA Peugeot Citroën employees, who have all been trained to "Lean Manufacturing". As a specialist in industrial and consumer logistics, the company has identified numerous connections between the profiles of the Aulnay employees and its own specific needs. Indeed, the required professional skills must apply to order preparation, fork-lift truck driving, truck loading and unloading, and handling.

According to Denis Martin, PSA Peugeot Citroën's Industrial Director, "this announcement evidences again the seriousness and quality of the approach to which the Group has committed itself, along with the public authorities and all the stakeholders implied in the revitalization of the Aulnay site".

Eric Hémar, President of ID Logistics, emphasized the quality of the teams trained by PSA Peugeot Citroën, which has been decisive in the Company's decision to settle on the Aulnay site: "This site is exceptional in terms of location and road access. Moreover, it is an opportunity for us to be able to benefit from the skills of the employees who currently work for PSA Peugeot Citroën. We will be able to offer them almost 600 jobs as part of the revitalization process of the site."
