

Gemalto recognized in Gartner's Magic Quadrant for User Authentication

Amsterdam, April 3, 2013 – Gemalto (Euronext NL0000400653 GTO), the world leader in digital security, has been recognized as a Leader in Gartner's 2013 Magic Quadrant for User Authentication*. The Magic Quadrant report presents a strategic analysis of key vendors measured on their completeness of vision and ability to execute. The leading vendors surveyed in this Magic Quadrant account for the majority of the market, by both customer and end-user numbers.

"We believe Gemalto's placement in the best part of the quadrant recognizes the accuracy of our strategy to provide end-to-end solutions, dedicated to solving problems specific to vertical markets such as healthcare, law enforcement, financial institutions, and corporate environments," said François Lasnier, Senior Vice President of Identity and Access at Gemalto. "We are dedicated to customer satisfaction and believe the complete customer experience starts with a superior solutions portfolio, and continues with dedicated support. We offer a scalable path to upgrade authentication technology to higher levels of security, and thanks to our experience, manage the growing need for mobile access."

Gemalto supplies a broad range of authentication software and services to thousands of the world's largest enterprises, service providers and governments. Gemalto's range of Protiva and Ezio solutions includes an expansive portfolio of authentication tools and services for enterprises with a significant focus on technology development to ensure products are designed to address market trends and customer needs with the highest level of protection.
