
INTRODUCING A NEW GLOBAL ALLERGY COMPANY

DATE: 6 November 2015

London (United Kingdom) - Stallergenes Greer plc (Euronext: STAGR) held on 5 November 2015 a webcast business update, hosted by Chairman and CEO, Fereydoun Firouz. This update covered the company's corporate strategy and short to mid-term priorities following the combination of Stallergenes and Greer Laboratories.

Fereydoun Firouz shared the significant and rapid progress being made in integrating Stallergenes and Greer to create a fully integrated, global biopharmaceutical company. Stallergenes Greer is now the only Allergy Immunotherapy (AIT) company with a complete subcutaneous, sublingual liquid and tablet portfolio, and the financial means to accelerate its current growth trajectory. Stallergenes Greer plc had combined sales in 2014 of €312.5 million (USD 344 million), EBITDA of €89.2 million (USD 98.3 million) and over 1,400 employees worldwide. The Company's business model, which is focused on select strategic research programs, manufacturing, development, marketing and M&A, will allow the Company to grow globally, in the expanding allergy immunotherapy market.

Fereydoun Firouz said: "Our purpose is to enable people with allergies to live normal lives. We are excited about our portfolio of AIT products in both EU and US markets and we are investing to strengthen our existing global leadership position with enhanced focus on the US market. We have made significant progress in integrating the companies in the context of defining our strategy, our brand, shaping the organization, governance model and focusing on where the true value is for all our stakeholders. Given our purpose, we will continue to invest in delivering life changing medicines and expand our geographical footprint in a targeted manner."
