Ingenico announces PCI PED v2 certification for its new iPA280 Payment PDA terminal

Neuilly-sur-Seine, November 30, 2009

Ingenico, a leading provider of payment solutions, announces that its brand new Payment Personal Digital Assistant (PayPDA), the iPA280, is now PCI PED v2 certified. Ensuring the highest level of security, this major certification comes after the EMV contact one received in June, the Visa payWave contactless one received October 1st, and the MasterCard^{MD} PayPass^{MC} contactless one received in November 12th.

The world's most advanced multi-market Payment Personal Digital Assistant (PayPDA), the Ingenico iPA280, combines secure card payment and PDA functionality, each one having its own OS – enabling thus business applications to cohabit as easily as a cash register associated with a payment PIN Pad.

The iPA280 transforms the sales environment into a mobile POS, offering superior quality of service and a complete purchasing experience.

Adding comprehensive PDA functionality to a rugged and affordable payment device, the iPA280 changes the rules of the game. For the first time Retail, Hospitality, Transportation and Mobile brands can add real value to the consumer experience, while generating significant incremental revenues at POS. Delivering security-as-standard, the iPA280 leverages Ingenico's world leading payment solution portfolio.

Capitalizing on Ingenico's existing portfolio of payment applications, the iPA280 can be utilized worldwide, once having obtained local certifications.
