

Systar Launches OmniVision Partner Program to Recruit European Resellers

ST. CLOUD, France and Vienna, VA, March 23, 2011 - Systar (ISIN: FR0000052854-SAR), a leading provider of performance management software, today announced the launch of a new, selective partner program to strengthen its European reseller ecosystem and increase the distribution of OmniVision in Europe.

OmniVision is a capacity planning, capacity management, and performance optimization solution that enables IT managers and their teams to confidently manage their critical applications as well as their physical and virtual infrastructure.

For outsourcers and managers in charge of outsourced environments, OmniVision represents the unquestionable tool that allows a constructive dialogue on quality levels and resource chargeback based on objective data.

Systar's partner program enables value-added resellers and specialized integrators to add OmniVision into their line of solutions and provide more services to their customers such as conducting infrastructure audits, building specific reports or implementing ITIL processes.

Systar provides its partners with daily sales, marketing, and technical support and also delivers all tools necessary to successfully engage new customers, develop skills through a certification program, deploy the products and take full advantage of the partnership opportunity.

"This program represents a strategic focus to strengthen the deployment of OmniVision in European markets," says Guy Kuster, CEO of Systar. "Our desire is to work with value-added resellers that have a strong presence in their domestic markets."

Claresco joined Systar's first partner program in 2004. "Becoming a Systar partner is an opportunity to work with the European leader in capacity management software and enables us to strengthen our line of solutions" says Stefan Hesse, CEO of Claresco. "We see increasing demand for software such as OmniVision which delivers full means for controlling heterogeneous physical and virtual environments."
