Vélizy, Sao Paulo – On 7 November 2011, Osiatis finalised an agreement to acquire a stake in the capital of Interadapt, a Brazilian company specialised in infrastructure engineering, with which it had been in exclusive negotiation. The final agreement reflects the terms of the letter of intent signed with the shareholders of Interadapt on 12 September 2011, and as described in the press release issued on 20 September. The agreement provides for a multiple-stage acquisition by Osiatis, of which the first is underway and will be carried out in two tranches: it will close during the first quarter of 2012, at the end of which Osiatis will hold between 27.5% and 35% of Interadapt's capital. In addition, Osiatis will have options based on the Brazilian company's results for 2013 and 2014, which will authorise the Group to acquire a majority holding from the first option.

About Interadapt

Interadapt has specialised in the infrastructure engineering and IT consulting market in Brazil for the last 9 years. The company offers infrastructure engineering service solutions (ITSM, security, etc.) and applications (lifecycle management, BPM / SOA, BI, etc.). Interadapt also provides external services such as service desk, application development workshop, managed services and supervision. With around 170 staff, the company has been classified as a "Great Place to Work" in 2011 amongst the top Brazilian companies in the IT and telecommunications industries. It stands out in its marketplace with its level of expertise, its quality of service and its excellence in project management.
