

Architect of an Open World™

Paris, 28 April 2010: Bull (Euronext Paris: BULL), an expert in open, flexible and secure information systems and mission-critical systems and one of Europe's leading players in the IT industry, today announces that its Board of Directors has received the resignation of Didier Lamouche, Chairman and Chief Executive Officer.

Didier Lamouche pointed out: "After more than 5 years at the head of Bull, my mission of transformation of the company is accomplished. With the acquisition early this year of Amesys, and the constitution of a long-term shareholder base, the Bull group now has the means to ensure its development. I would like to thank everyone at Bull for their commitment and their support over these years and I wish them further success in the next phase."

The Board has taken note of this decision that will become effective as of 10 May, 2010, at which time the Board of Directors will designate the next Chairman and CEO.

The Board underlined the importance of Didier Lamouche's contribution over the last 5 years, as well as the success in the group's repositioning, and saluted his efforts while at the head of Bull.

The Board has decided the constitution of a work group composed of Bull management and animated by Philippe Vannier, member of the board of directors. This group will be charged with making proposals to comfort the strategy of the company.
