

Genzyme Product Supply Update

- CVR Production Milestone unlikely to be met -

Paris, France - July 28, 2011 - Sanofi (EURONEXT: SAN; NYSE: SNY) updates on Genzyme product supply.

Since the beginning of the year, Genzyme has been able to supply Cerezyme[®] (imiglucerase for injection) to patients globally at normal dosing levels and has maintained consistent supply of Fabrazyme[®] (algalsidase beta) to current patients at a reduced dose.

Genzyme continues to make progress at its Allston Landing manufacturing plant and the company is on track with requirements of the Consent Decree. The company will no longer perform fill/finish operations within the Allston facility, which is ahead of the August 31 Consent Decree deadline for products sold outside of the United States. Nevertheless, based upon actual production trends to date and lead times to release products for the market, Sanofi does not expect that the 2011 Contingent Value Right (NASDAQ: GCVRZ) Production Milestone will be met.

To return to normal supply levels of Fabrazyme for existing and new patients, it will be necessary to utilize the additional capacity from Genzyme's new manufacturing facility in Framingham, Massachusetts. The company expects to be able to provide product made in Framingham within the first quarter of 2012. This timeline is subject to successful completion of process validation currently underway at the facility and regulatory authorities' approval.

Sanofi and Genzyme are committed to providing normal, uninterrupted therapy for all patients as soon as possible and are devoting the resources to achieve this objective.
