"Joining Voltalia is an exciting challenge for me. I really enjoy the dynamism, the agility and the team spirit of a young and promising company. Voltalia (Euronext Paris, ISIN code: FR0011995588), an international player in renewable energies, announces the appointment of Christian Egal as Head of European Subsidiaries. He succeeds Michel Crémieux who takes responsibility for Strategy and Organization.

Christian Egal will be responsible for boosting the Group's growth in European countries where it is already present in order to accelerate the development and implementation of new projects in those countries. As the Group expands into new countries, Christian will form permanent teams to ensure a sustainable growth.

Christian Egal brings along 35 years of experience in the energy sector, mostly in renewable energies. After his start at ADEME, he joined Sinerg, France's leading energy third-party financing company, where he became Deputy Chief Executive Officer. Following a period at Cogetherm, EDF's subsidiary specialized in the development of cogeneration projects, he joined Gamesa as Managing Director for France in 2003. He then became CEO of EDF Energy Renewables, the subsidiary of EDF Energies Nouvelles in the UK. Since 2015, he was Head of International Operations at EDF EN.

Michel Crémieux is now Deputy Chief Executive Officer in charge of Group Strategy and Organization. After serving as a leader of international energy companies, he brings to Voltalia his strategic vision and experience in corporate structuring. In a context of strong organic growth and with the integration of Martifer Solar, human resources will be a major challenge in his new position. In this new role, Michel Crémieux will focus on team development and on further growing internal expertise while always fostering the culture that makes Voltalia special.
