

Chargeurs Luxury Fibers, through its pioneering NATIVA™ label, signs a long-term partnership with SMCP for the supply of sustainable NATIVA™ wool

- Chargeurs Luxury Fibers announces a long-term partnership with SMCP for the supply of certified NATIVA™ wool, which is fully traceable and sourced from farms practicing regenerative agriculture
- SMCP will incorporate this wool across its iconic brands – Sandro, Maje, Claudie Pierlot, and Fursac – ensuring a responsible approach driving positive outcomes for the climate, biodiversity, animal welfare and local farming communities
- This partnership underscores both companies' commitment to scaling regenerative agricultural practices within the value chain, with the shared ambition to accelerate the sustainable and large-scale transformation of the fashion industry
- This agreement further strengthens NATIVA™'s position as the unrivaled global reference in responsible and regenerative natural fiber sourcing.

Federico Paullier, Chief Executive Officer of Chargeurs Luxury Fibers, stated: "Through this partnership, we are proud to support SMCP in transforming its supply chain with a measurable positive impact on farmers, climate, and biodiversity. Together, we are demonstrating that the future of fashion lies in a new kind of supply chain—one that starts at the source. These new sourcing flows ensure strong environmental integrity, local biodiversity regeneration and full traceability."

A strategic partnership with SMCP for sustainable NATIVA™ wool sourcing

Chargeurs Luxury Fibers, through its pioneering NATIVA™ label, has entered into a long-term partnership with SMCP for the supply of certified NATIVA™ wool – traceable and regenerative. More than a sustainable sourcing initiative, this collaboration champions regenerative agriculture, fostering respect for nature and supporting local economies and farming communities.

From Uruguay's farms to the heart of contemporary fashion pieces, this long-term partnership marks a new chapter in the journey of responsible sourcing where regenerative agriculture, animal welfare, and blockchain-backed transparency define the fabric of tomorrow.

NATIVA™, the global benchmark for traceable and regenerative wool

Since its creation in 2017 by Chargeurs Luxury Fibers, NATIVA™ has set the benchmark in responsible natural fibers sourcing. Its system guarantees animal welfare, regenerative land management, local community support, blockchain-backed traceability, and independently audited environmental impacts.

NATIVA™ supports the transition of sheep farming toward regenerative agriculture. This transformation includes soil restoration, biodiversity protection, elimination of synthetic inputs, and a strong commitment to animal welfare.

Beyond its ecological benefits, this program directly improves farmers' livelihoods through sustainable economic partnerships, skills development, and enhanced working conditions. Scientific audits ensure compliance with key environmental indicators, while NATIVA™'s blockchain technology guarantees full transparency – from the pasture where the sheep graze to the garment worn by the end consumer.

Following prestigious partnerships with LVMH, Gucci, Ba&sh, Stella McCartney and Vivienne Westwood, this new collaboration with SMCP further reinforces NATIVA™'s leadership in sustainable fashion. NATIVA™ continues to lead the way and set the standard for more responsible sourcing in the industry.
