Emerging market risk

Investment in Notes which are linked to an Relevant Factor, Reference Asset or Reference Asset Component with a connection to an emerging market may entail significant risks which are not associated with a similar investment in equities or indices from developed markets. Because of the special risks associated with investing in emerging markets, Notes which are linked to a Relevant Factor, Reference Asset or Reference Asset Component with a connection to an emerging market, including without limitation, Notes linked to the changes in the exchange rates of one or more emerging market currencies, a security or a basket of securities issued by issuers incorporated in one or more emerging market countries or one or more indices linked to the performance thereof or other emerging market indices, should be considered speculative. Economies in emerging markets generally are heavily dependent upon international trade and, accordingly, may be affected adversely by trade barriers, foreign exchange controls (including taxes), managed adjustments in relative currency values and other protectionist measures imposed or negotiated by the countries with which they trade. These economies also may be affected adversely by their economic, financial, military and political conditions.

Investing in the Notes involves substantial risks. As a consequence, prospective investors should be aware that the Notes are only intended for investors who have the knowledge and experience in financial and business matters necessary to enable them to evaluate the risks of an investment in the Notes. In purchasing any Notes, an investor will be deemed to represent that it is such an investor and has such knowledge and experience. Prospective investors should consider the risk factors set forth under "Risk Factors" in the Prospectus and the risks described herein.
