

Equasens Activates the Business Continuity Plan for its subsidiary ASCA in Chessy (France,77)

Villers-lès-Nancy, September 22, 2026, 5:45 p.m. CEST – Equasens (ISIN: FR0012882389 – Ticker: EQS), a leader in digital healthcare solutions, announces that the headquarters and warehouse of its subsidiary ASCA, a specialist in the deployment of electronic labeling solutions for pharmacies, were affected by a fire, the source of which has now been extinguished.

ASCA, a subsidiary of the Equasens Group, installs electronic labels in pharmacies. The company currently has more than 4,200 customers. Its Chessy facility, which covers approximately 800 sq.m., houses offices for 25 employees as well as the inventory and equipment needed for installations.

On the evening of September 21, 2026, a fire broke out at this site. No one was present, and there were no injuries. Operations to extinguish the main fire lasted all night, mobilizing more than 80 firefighters.

The building and the inventory stored inside were destroyed. The exact circumstances of how the fire started have yet to be determined and are currently the subject of standard investigations and expert assessments.

Activation of the Business Continuity Plan

Equasens activated its subsidiary's Business Continuity Plan as soon as the incident occurred.

ASCA's information systems (CRM, ERP, and line-of-business applications) were not affected, as they are backed up and hosted at the Group's headquarters in Nancy.

A backup stock, already available on another of the Group's storage platforms, will ensure business continuity over the next few days.

Furthermore, given the upcoming deliveries, the period during which operations will be completely suspended is expected to be limited to four weeks.

The Group's logistics capacities and channels are being reorganized accordingly, and manufacturers of labels and other materials are being mobilized to urgently launch new production runs.

Denis SUPPLISSON, CEO of Equasens, stated: "Our priority is to support our teams and minimize the impact of this incident on our customers as much as possible. No employees were injured, and our information systems and business applications remain fully operational. We immediately implemented our business continuity plan and mobilized all of the Group's logistical resources to restore operations as quickly as possible. The next scheduled delivery, along with the acceleration of subsequent shipments, should enable us to minimize the disruption period as much as possible. We stand with our employees, our customers, and our partners."

The 25 employees at the site are receiving support, and appropriate measures are being implemented (remote work, reduced working hours) as needed. The incident has been reported to the insurers, and experts have been called in to assess the consequences.

Equasens will keep the market informed of any significant developments in the situation.
