Bouygues Telecom, Free-iliad Group and Orange joint statement following the rejection of their acquisition bid by Altice France

Bouygues Telecom, Free-iliad Group and Orange have taken note of the Altice group's decision to reject their joint non-binding offer submitted on the evening of 14 October to acquire a large part of Altice France's telecoms activities.

The three operators remain convinced of the relevance of their bid and of the value of the project they are pursuing for the market and all its stakeholders, customers, employees, creditors and shareholders. Indeed, such a project would both preserve a competitive ecosystem to the benefit of consumers and support continued investment in national telecom infrastructure.

Bouygues Telecom, Free-iliad Group and Orange will therefore maintain their offer and wish to engage in constructive dialogue with the Altice group and its shareholders in order to assess how this project could progress going forward.

About Orange

Orange is one of the leading telecommunications operators worldwide, with a revenue of €40.3 billion in 2024 and 124,600 employees as of June 30, 2025, including 68,700 in France. The Group served 300 million customers as of June 30, 2025, including 262 million mobile customers and 22 million fixed broadband customers. These figures account for the deconsolidation of certain activities in Spain related to the creation of the joint venture MASORANGE. The Group operates in 26 countries (including non-consolidated countries).

Orange is also a global leader in telecommunications services for multinational enterprises under the Orange Business brand.

Orange is listed on Euronext Paris (symbol ORA).
